Find the meaning for Haere Atu!
by André Ngāpō

illustrated by Vasanti Unka

In this lively humorous story, lots of people are enjoying themselves at the beach when two hungry sandflies, Namu and Sandy, arrive looking for lunch. The sandflies are delighted to see so much exposed skin but not surprisingly, the beachgoers don't want to be eaten! The text is enhanced by some Māori vocabulary, the meaning of which is strongly supported by the context.

Titi Tōrea

Show off your awesome musical and rhythm skills with ti rākau. A traditional Māori stick game.

What you will need:

- Two sheets of white pepa (paper)
- Colouring pencils
- Tape
- Two small magazines or nūpepa (newspapers).

How to make your tī rakau:

- Roll up your magazine or nūpepa as tight as you can.
- Tape around the edges and middle to hold it in place.
- Make two rolls.
- Tape a piece of white paper around each roll and decorate.

How to play:

- Create a rhythm by tapping the end of your tī rakau on the ground or tapping your tī rakau together.
- Face a partner and try tapping your tī rakau at the same time as your partner.
- Try throwing your tī rakau diagonally to your partner and getting them to do the same at the same time.
- Play music and tap and throw your tī rakau to the beat.
